UConn Junior Receives Pedneault Forensic Accounting Scholarship

(Glastonbury, CT) Kristen Edwards of Manchester, a junior at the University of Connecticut, received a scholarship provided by Stephen Pedneault, founder of Forensic Accounting Services LLC of Glastonbury at the UConn School of Business annual awards banquet on April 23rd held in Storrs.

Pedneault, who will teach an online course in forensic accounting through UConn this summer and in the fall, provided the scholarship to accounting majors who show promise and passion for the forensic accounting field.

"I am pleased to have an opportunity to help young people who want to pursue a future in forensic accounting," Pedneault said. "Supporting bright young people today will ensure future quality in the profession and I am proud to be part of that."

Edwards was on the Dean's List for the spring and fall semesters at UConn, where she is pursuing a Bachelor's Degree in Accounting. She holds an Associate's Degree in Accounting and Business Administration from Manchester Community College.

Pedneault is a certified public accountant, certified fraud examiner and forensic certified public accountant. He is the principal and founder of Forensic Accounting Services, which specializes in financial investigations to uncover fraud and embezzlement, provides litigation support, and assists with matrimonial and probate financial disclosures. The firm also provides a host of prevention programs and services for companies throughout Connecticut.
